But Two Contentions.

This subject promises to provoke a big fight in the City Committee, as some of the members of that body, who usually exercise a good deal of influence over its actions, have declared that it will be the better plan to "bunch" the fight, and to have but one primary for all the offices to be filled. There are but two arguments made in support of this contention. One is the cry of heavy expense, and the other that the people do not desire to attend two primaries within so short a time. The former is fully answered by appeals of the candidates in favor of separate primaries, and the fact that they are ready and willing to put up the money, while the latter is considered quite weak, in that Richmond Democrats never regard it a great burden to attend primaries, so conveniently are they situated with reference to their respective polling places. It is argued by those who favor two primaries, that it was never contemplated that State and city affairs should be mixed in the manner which is now proposed, and the local candidates believe that inasmuch as they pay for the privilege of running for office, their views should be to some extent considered.

A strong fight over the proposition is expected in the committee.
